

Revolution gone sour

- Versailles, the site of the meetings of “The General Assembly” and “The National Assembly”.
- Paris was only twelve miles from Versailles. The commoners of Paris heard of the Third Estate’s revolt and prepared to join the revolution.
- Several cities in France supported the National Assembly and the commoners of Paris in the revolution of 1789. The following were some of those many cities: Marseille, Montpellier, Bordeaux, Rennes, Caen, Lyon, Troyes, Amien.
- Throughout the countryside, peasants revolted, invaded the mansions of the rich, and murdered the hated noblemen of the Second Estate.
- Many in France, called Royalists, did not support the revolution of 1789.

Revolution gone sour

NEW WORDS!

Estate - The estates of the realm were the broad social orders of the hierarchically conceived society, sometimes distinguished as the three estates: the clergy, the nobility, and commoners.

National Assembly - A revolutionary assembly formed by the representatives of the Third Estate.

The Bastille - the royal prison of Paris.

Duke/Baron - A nobleman of high rank.

Royalist - A supporter of the principles of monarchy.

The Temple - a dark dungeon in France.

Tumbril - a rough farm cart.

The Bastille, the royal prison of Paris, was an old fortress with eight towers and walls fifteen feet thick.

Revolution gone sour

NEW WORDS!

Estate - The estates of the realm were the broad social orders of the hierarchically conceived society, sometimes distinguished as the three estates: the clergy, the nobility, and commoners.

National Assembly - A revolutionary assembly formed by the representatives of the Third Estate.

The Bastille - the royal prison of Paris.

Duke/Baron - A nobleman of high rank.

Royalist - A supporter of the principles of monarchy.

The Temple - a dark dungeon in France.

Tumbril - a rough farm cart.

Sailing South

James Cook anchored his ship in a peaceful bay so that his sailors could find fresh water and prepare for the long journey back to Europe.